Handcuffing and Restraints

Topic: Use of Force

Accreditation Standard: 8.2015.1 USE OF FORCE / DEADLY FORCE

DTB Date: 02/28/2021

Scenario:

Man, I will be glad to get this guy booked, Officer Sarah Gorman thinks, looking at the prisoner in the back seat of her patrol vehicle. Kenneth Becker was the front seat passenger in a car Officer Gorman stopped about 30 minutes ago. It turned out that Mr. Becker was wanted for failing to appear on a traffic offense, so Officer Gorman told him he was under arrest. He was cordial at first, but the fight was on as soon as she pulled out her handcuffs.

Mr. Becker was hard to control, so Officer Gorman called for backup, and Officer Trenton Reed came to help. He's not a very big man, but he sure is strong, Officer Gorman thought as she caught her breath after they finally handcuffed Mr. Becker and placed him in the back of her vehicle.

"Hey, Trent. Can you follow me to the department in case he causes more trouble?" asks Officer Gorman.

"You bet," Officer Reed responds.

Mr. Becker yells nonstop during the drive, using foul language to express his unwillingness to go to jail and to blame Officer Gorman for his current dilemma.

Officer Gorman takes her eyes off the rearview mirror for a moment to look at slowing traffic ahead of her. Boom! Officer Gorman jumps, surprised by the loud sound at the cruiser's rear passenger door. Did we just get hit? she thinks, looking to the back seat to check on her prisoner. Immediately, she sees that the source of the loud sound was Mr. Becker kicking the rear passenger door of the vehicle. How did he get out of his seat belt? she wonders as Mr. Becker aims his next kick to the rear passenger window.

"Hey! Stop that!" Officer Gorman yells. "You're going to hurt yourself doing that!"

"I ain't going to jail!" responds Mr. Becker.

Officer Gorman flips on her overhead lights and whips to the side of the road. Officer Reed does the same, pulling his patrol vehicle behind hers.

Officer Gorman jumps out, rushes around the back of the vehicle and abruptly opens the rear passenger door. Mr. Becker's lower legs drop partially out of the open car door as he glares up at Officer Gorman.

"Looks like he's causing problems again," says Officer Reed as he walks up to the two of them.

"That's for sure," she says. "Will you help me restrain his legs so he doesn't try to kick out the window?"

"Happy to help," Officer Reed responds.

ISSUE: What notifications should Officer Gorman make regarding her use of these additional restraints?
